Size Chart for Round Wire Gauges
in American Wire Gauge (AWG)

When viewed or printed to scale, blue box above measures 5" x 2.5" (127 x 63mm)

WIRE GAUGE SIZES

There are many different thicknesses of jewelry wire, and the sizes are distinguished by a measuring system where the thickness of the wire is referred to as the 'gauge'. Ear wires, jump rings, headpins, and other items made from wire are also described by their gauges. For example, for 18 gauge jump rings, the gauge refers to the thickness of the wire used to form the jump ring, and not the diameter of the jump ring itself.

The first thing I want you to know and commit to memory is that the smaller the gauge number, the thicker the wire. As you can see, 10 gauge wire is pretty big (about 2.6mm in diameter) and 28ga wire is very very tiny (about 1/3 of a millimeter in diameter). The chart below will help you visualize this – you may want to print it off and keep it close at hand until you are comfortable with the concept of wire gauge!
